War Protesters Found Innocent

Happy hugs were exchanged in City Court yesterday when five war protesters were found innocent of charges of disorderly conduct under their rights to free speech.

Judge Andrew G. Celli ruled that a "die-in" held at the Internal Revenue Service branch office at 39 State St. April 17 caused only minor inconvenience to pedestrians and was protected as symbolic speech.

The defendants arrived expecting to be found guilty and when Celli finished reading his decision they were visibly surprised.

Judith Taylor said, "Oh!" and covered her face with her hands. Robert H. Staley, who came with a knapsack packed with philosophy books to read in jail, half rose from his seat. About 20 supporters burst into applause, which Celli ordered stopped.

Those charged were: Staley, 24, of 652 Linden Ave.; The Rev. Walter Hanss, 31, assistant pastor at St. Monica's Roman Catholic Church; Sister Margaret Hall, 24, of 4 Eastland Ave., Brighton; Judith Taylor, 22, of Woodside Drive, Penfield, and David Black, 22, of 1100 S. Goodman St.

All five participated in the trial as their own defense attorneys and defended their actions on the witness stand. The trial lasted four afternoons during which they tried to broaden its scope to include "the massive disorderly conduct by the U.S. government in Vietnam" and "the use of income tax to buy bombs to kill and maim the peoples of Southeast Asia."

Most of the testimony, however, dealt with how much of the sidewalk was blocked after the five lay down in a semicircle under a figure dressed in black to represent the specter of death to dramatize the victims of the war.

In his decision, Celli found that no crowd formed until police arrived with wagons and carried the demonstrators from the sidewalk.

He noted there was no violence or obscenity involved in the protest and said the die-in was a legal exercise of the defendants' constitutional rights.

"The mere inconvenience that was caused . . . would not be sufficient to find them guilty of the offense of disorderly conduct," he ruled. "judged in the context of the fundamental rights guaranteed to the defendants."

Summa cum laude

An abstract graphic design featuring a complex arrangement of overlapping, curved, and shaded lines that create a sense of depth and movement. The lines are drawn in a dark, textured style, possibly using a fine-line pen or a digital brush with a grainy texture. The overall composition is centered around a white, irregularly shaped area that contains the text "the end". The background is a light, off-white color, and the overall effect is one of a finished, artistic piece.
